Notes

* We had an amazing field trip on Friday! I hope you enjoyed the Jonamac apples. :) A delicious cross between the McIntosh and Jonathan.

Our Learning

4th Grade Math: Students learned about benchmarks for standard units of measurement: mass and weight. This week we will learn about volume and capacity and study metric and customary types of measurement.

Reading: Students received their Raz-Kids accounts this week. We will use these accounts for our "listen to reading" section of Daily 5. Each book has comprehension questions that follow. I have made students aware that I am able to see their activity on the application. This is a great tool that many of them are familiar with from previous years.

Science/Social Studies: In Social Studies we are working together on our business plan for selling apple cider in October. I am so pleased with students reasoning and participation. More details to come...

Writing: We continue to craft short narrative stories, create fictional characters, and structure paragraphs as practice for our essay style narrative.
